President, Carole Bellidora Communications

Carole Bellidora Westfall has built a distinguished career at the intersection of art, philanthropy, and cultural communications. She spent twenty years at Sotheby's Auction House as Vice President and Head of Client Services and Special Events, where her department supported major landmark sales, including the Estate of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, the Jewels of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, and the Andy Warhol estate.

Following her tenure at Sotheby's, she worked with Van Cleef & Arpels and later founded the Customer Relations Department at Phillips, de Pury & Luxembourg, enhancing high-level client engagement and institutional visibility. Carole is also a published writer. She co-wrote the monthly column Points of Style for The Boulevard, appearing in ten North Shore Long Island newspapers, and published the children's book An Animal Alphabet.

As co-founder of Biddle & Bellidora, she has represented leading nonprofit and cultural organizations, including Americans for the Arts, the New York City Mission Society Bicentennial, City College Center for the Arts, Humane Society and the American Foundation of Savoy Orders, for which she organized the annual Royal Savoy Ball, a signature international event. These efforts earned a front page story in the New York Times' Giving section.
